radicle: the first part of a plant embryo to emerge and the part that develops into the primary root.

We all share a common interest to build a better healthcare system and improve the lives of all people. We must apply the same clinical approach to cannabis care as we do with other treatment modalities.

Radicle Health recognizes the complexity of cannabis treatment, where chemovar groups, extraction methods, product variants, and patient biochemistry necessitate a comprehensive and collaborative approach to developing individual patient treatment plans.
